Berea's Donors

On Wednesday was held the annual holiday of Berea in honor of its donors.

One of the finest things about a great institution like Berea is that it shows the working together of a great many good people. There were the founders who first thought of the institution. Then come the teachers and the students and the parents. But there are others who are thought of perhaps less frequently; we mean those who have given money for the support of teachers and students and for the buildings, land, books, scientific apparatus, furnishings and all other property which is necessary for a school.

Berea's donors have been the most unselfish of any in the land. They have not given expecting to receive any reward of praise or fame. They have believed in Christian education and felt certain that the young people of the southern mountains would improve their opportunities if given a chance for education.

It is very seldom that any number of donors actually come to Berea to enjoy the sight of the good work which they have promoted. All the more they are deserving of our thanks and honor.

Greater than all the sums of money given is this example of true Christian patriotism. The time is coming when Berea can be supported by the gifts of its own neighbors and graduates, but we shall always be especially thankful to those who have given in the years of Berea's struggling toward a "start." Thousands of people as poor as most of us have given their small contributions, and a few of the great men who have made large sums of money, like Pearsons and Kennedy and Hall, have used their business sagacity in picking out Berea as a place for their larger gifts.

COLUMBIA Tune: Auld Lang Syne

Behold our loved Columbia Arrayed in Nature's best, The sunshine decks her radiant crown.

The morning star her breast! With Flag of Liberty enwrapped-Bright folds that Peace has furled-

Emblazoned with the light of truth And hope of all the world.

Pacific sings her golden song Upon thy sunset shore,

Atlantic's wave of Liberty And Union evermore; From all the earth thy pilgrims came

And to thy glory bow, The diadem of human hopes Endazzling thy fair brow!

Columbia, with sword of peace, One battle yet remains, Awake and drive the god of war From off the ocean plains;

Let anguish cry no more to Heaven And countless millions moan, Awake, Columbia, awake, And flaming Mars dethrone!

The glory of all nations rests On peace and on good will, The mighty Brotherhood of Man Is earth's great power still:

Shine, sacred orb and flame of love, Till Old Night, backward hurled, Sees man befriend his fellow man And Justice rule the world!

SUNLIGHT IN GARDENS.

No amount of fertilizer, watering and cultivation will make up 💠 for the absence of sunlight in a garden. Home gardeners before attempting for the first time to use a back yard or other space should consider carefully how many hours a day any part of the yard is in shadow from buildings, fences or trees. At least + five hours of sunlight a day are necessary for a successful garden. The more sunlight they get the better it is for most vegetables. For this reason it is bad practice to put plants of low • habit between tall growing + plants which will shade them • for the greater part of the day. • As a rule foliage crops such as lettuce, spinach and kale do + fairly well in partial shade, but + even these must have sunshine + shadier parts for such plants and reserve the sunny spaces for . those which must have plenty of + sunlight to grow any fruit properly.

agriculture. Lettuce does not withstand heat well and thrives therefore in the early spring or late autumn. In order to seeds broadcast in the bed and to remove the leaves as rapidly as they become large enough for use. It is better, however, to sow the seeds in tows fourteen to sixteen inches apart, and when the plants come up to thin them to the desired distance. With the heading type this should be about twelve inches apart. This will result in the formation of rather compact heads, and the entire plant may then be cut for use.

Radishes are so hardy that they may be grown through the winter in cold frames in the latitude of Washington and farther south in the open ground In the north they require hotbeds, but I wish to thank you for the copy can be sown in the open ground as to eighteen inches apart and thinned slightly as soon as the plants are up. three to four weeks after planting. If the plants are allowed to remain long in the open ground the roots loose their crispness and delicate flavor, and in order to secure a constant supply successive plantings should be made every two weeks. One ounce of radish seed is sufficient to plant 100 feet of row. A large percentage of the seed germinates, and if the sowing is done carefully later thinning may be unnecessary. The first radishes to appear may be pulled as soon as they are of sufficient size, and this will leave enough room for those that are a little later. > CHAPTER I. Midst the Hills of Judea.

IE setting sun, disappearing over the western hills toward the distant Mediterranean, cast lengthening shadows from the great ng tree which sheltered the archway in the garden wall. Far off in the distance a single trumpet sounded, faint and indistinct. A nearer trumpet echoed and re-echoed the sound. A shepherd hidden in a nearby valley took up the silvery notes upon his own instrument and sounded the tidings that the day was o'er.

Upon the sliken canopied roof of the house of Jesse, of the tribe of Judea, a maiden sat embroidering a girdle. She was fair and slender, with brownish hair, which hung in two long braids across her shoulders. But, while she plied her needle industriously and seemed devoted to her task, she ever and anon shaded her eyes to gaze wistfully out over the horizon. Far in the distance the sheep were peacefully grazing upon the hillside, even now being berded together by the watchful shepherds and their dogs in preparation for the coming of the night. To the east and to the west the maiden cast her eyes in vain, for what she saw satisfied her not. To the north lay Hebron, the ancient city where the great King David had first reigned. and beyond that-somewhere to the north, so the maiden had heard-was a great and wondrous city of beautiful buildings, great palaces, rich caravans and fashionably dressed folk-Jerusalem. But of all this the maiden knew naught and had no desire to learn. With a sigh she resumed her work upon the girdle.

Inside the house of Jesse all was excitement, for the morrow was the hallowed day when none might labor in the fields. The trumpets called the men from the fields and the women from their labors to prepare for the evening mail which should precede the approaching festival. In the courtyard by the well the faithful Rissah, she who had been in service as handmaiden to Huldah, wife of Jesse, these many years, gathered up the clean linen which had been washed by two girls kneading the garments with their clean bare feet in a trough of water. Nearer the house the women grinding corn between two large flat stones had already ceased their labors and were gathering up the grain.

A trumpet blew again—nearer. A shepherd was bringing in part of his flock. Eagerly the girl, watching from the roof, ran down the great flight of stone steps which led to the courtyard and approached the newcomer.
"Shelah," cried the girl anxiously.

"Hast thou seen Jether?"

The shepherd, an aged man with a young lamb snuggled tenderly in his rms, shook his head sadly.

responde "Nay, Mistress Naomi." Shelah, laying the lambkin upon the grass by the well and signifying that Rissah should wash its hurt. "Nay, Jether was not upon the hills last night. I found his flock untended. For the second day Jether hath not led them to water, and none knows where the lad may be. Some of the sheep the wolves have slain and others, like this poor lambkin, hath suffered because of his neglect."

The girl clasped her hands together

"But what of Jether?" she inquired tensely. "Can he be ill or sick?" "He should not have left the flock untended," said Shelah sternly. "Nay, he was not ill." "But can aught have happened to him? Oh, Shelah, last night I dreamed he was in fearful peril, but of what I know not." Naomi, with an agonized sob which she vainly sought to sup-press, seated herself on the stone edge of the well and watched Rissah as she bound up the broken leg of the lamb-

"What meanest thou?" cried Naomi quickly.

"On the road hither I met Ozen of Hebron, he who keeps an inn there, and Ozen told me Jether was there all night with a companion, Tola, an evil man whom all know well and far too well to think well of him," chuckled the elderly shepherd, pleased with his own heavy wit.

The young girl came to him anxiously and touched his arm.

"Shelah," she said softly, so that none might hear, "thou wilt not say aught to mine uncle against Jether?" The shepherd lifted his hand as if in protest.

"Nay, he did great wrong to leave the flock alone while he drank through the night with Tola and his friends," he answered. "For a young man like Master Jether to neglect home, his flock, his duties to his father and to his elder brother, Gaal, who some day will be master here, is not right. I know full well the lad is headstrong, impetuous, but he should fear the wrath of his father if he continues in herds and their flocks passed into the courtyard and the sun sank lower upon the horizon.

"Please, Shelah, thou will aid me! Do thou hasten to Hebron and find Jether. He has forgotten that at sunlown we celebrate the hallowed day. Hasten, I beg of thee."

The stolid shepherd shook his head sternly. A trumpet blew in the dis-

"Do not the trumpets sound on every hill? Do they not bid all cease from toil and hasten home to cleanse themselves before they partake of the holy meal? Listen! Do not the trumpets sound in Hebron? If Master Jether wills to come he'll come. Nay, nay, good mistress Naomi, I cannot speak to Jether louder with mine own voice than can these trumpets which sound from every hillside. Give me the lamb kin, good Rissah. I will care for it

The shepherd tenderly took the lamb n his arms and, followed by the dogs, which had hung about his heels joyously, went into the sheepfold. Rissah put her arms tenderly about the young girl and sought to comfort her.

"Were it not best that I should leave water in Master Jether's room and lay out fresh garments for him?" she inquired. "He may come with little time to spare.'

"Oh, yes, Rissah! But what if be should not come?" replied Naomi, tear-"Suppose that he should not come? There are many wolves in these hills of Judea, and once I know that Jether killed a lion on foot, with but a knife as his only weapon. Suppose that last night when he failed to watch the sheep some evil mayhap befell him? Oh, Rissah, I shudder when I think that Jether may never return to us!"

The elder woman smiled reassuringly and caressed the young girl.

"I know thy secret, Mistress Nao-d," she whispered. "Nay, do not start in surprise. Jether is a fine lad, beloved of the entire countryside, and not a maiden of Hebron but would be honored to have her hand sought in marriage by the younger son of Jesse. And thou art a beautiful girl, who must win the love of all who know Yet one thing doth trouble me much, Mistress Naomi.

The girl half dried her tears and turned curiously.

"What dost thou mean?" The aged servant besitated, as if fearing to speak.

"Say on, Rissah. What hast thou in thy mind?"

"Much talk I have heard these past few months among the servants in thy uncle's household," said Rissah softly, glancing around to make sure that none might bear, "much talk have I heard that thy Cousin Gaal cast his eyes many times toward thee, far too often indeed to please those who know of thy regard for thy Cousin Jether."

Naomi sprang to her feet indignantly.

"Gaal indeed!" she cried, her eyes flashing fire. "Let me tell thee, Rissah, when Naomi is chosen in marriage it will be by one whom she herself doth select, not by the pious, elder, stern and hard hearted brother who doth treat our Jether so shamelessly For him I care not nor never will But, oh, Rissah"-

The girl's voice trembled, and it was with difficulty that she kept back her

"Oh, Rissah, what if Jether come not? Last night I dreamed that on a sudden a black cloud swept across a sky as fair as this one. Jether was near me laughing in his happy way scorned my warning once the world was dark. I could not see him. When the cloud passed Jether was gone. Only his voice came to me from the distance, so sad, so full of pain. But what it was I could not tell, yet, oh, what pain was in it!"

Rissah tenderly embraced the young girl and led her toward the flight of stone steps leading upward to the roof and beyond that to the round dome.

"Come with me to the watch tower." she said softly. "Let us look toward Hebron. There is still light enough to watch the road for the coming of Master Jether. Come, Mistress Naomi!"

Together the two women slowly climbed the stone steps, passed under the silken drapery, mounted to the top of the rounded dome, where, from a small platform, one could see the countryside for miles around. . . . .

"Another goblet of wine to seal anew our friendship!"

The speaker, a man of middle age well dressed, with a handsomely embroidered tunic of a rich dark cloth bound with a leathern girdle, and wearing costly sandals embroidered with beads, seemed in striking contrast to the lad who faced him in the inner courtyard of the inn of Ozen, on the outskirts of the town of Hebron. They were seated at a rough wooden table the courtyard of a plain, square building, the open sky above them showing that nightfall was not far distant. The elder man seemed trying to convey to his companion some of the

"Nay, I'll drink no more," said the

The elderly man laughed, a wicked and sardonic laugh.

"And how often have I spoken those selfsame words," he cried mockingly. "But to eat without drinking is like devouring one's own blood. e, my good Jether; thou art a foolish boy to spend thy days thus moping away with thy sorrows. I had thought thee a bright, industrious, care free lad, for surely thou hast proved thyself a royal good friend and an en-tertaining companion. Another goblet, my Jether, ere we part."

The boy arose somewhat unsteadily. Lines of dissipation showed under his eyes. It was apparent that sleep and he had been strangers for hours.

"I'll drink no more," he cried petulantly. "For a day and a night have I spent my time with thee, Tola, and thou hast been a good friend and hast taught me many things and told me much of that wonderful city where some day I may journey, but I must go hence now. Too long have I neg-lected my flock."

Tola laughed, an evil smile lighting his face as he drained the goblet.

"Thy flock?" he cried. "Wherefore shouldst a likely lad like thee tend sheep upon the hillside? Thou art a Let clumsy goatherds and country louts spend weary days and tiresome nights guarding thy flocks. Thou art the son of a rich man, Jether. From Ozen, the landlord, I did hear but yestere'en that some day when thou dost inherit thy portion thou wilt have much gold and lands and many cattle. Why, with the wealth that will some day be thine, thou canst go to the court of Solomon-perchance become a prince thyself-thou canst live like a king in Jerusalem."

Jether's eyes lighted with anticipation, but in a moment his face became downcast.

"Aye, that may be," he responded slowly, "when I inherit my portion." Tola rose, came closer to the boy and took him by the arm. "Thy father is aged, Jether." he said slowly. "Perchance".

The boy turned upon him quickly. "Speak not of my father, Tola!" he cried angrily. "When it is the will of God that he shall be taken from us then mayst thou speak thus, not behave been wasted. Look at me. When but a lad I left my father's home, near these very hills of Hebron, and journeyed to Jerusalem, to Joppa, to Babylon itself. Nay, it seems but yesterday I stood in the streets of Jerusalem and watched the workmen rearing a great mass of stone and wood which men do say the great King Solomon plans as a temple to the Lord. Come thou and see likewise, good Jether, what wonders there are in this great world. Leave thy stupid hills and come to Jerusalem. I set upon my journey tomorrow.'

"To Jerusalem!" the boy cried increduously. "But my father will never give his consent.'

"Go then without it," replied Tola sarcastically. "Thy father is rich. Demand thou thy portion and go forth. Who knows what fortune may befall thee? The great King David was but a shepherd lad amid these very hills." "But if my father doth refuse?"

"When my father failed to give me what I deemed my right I found a way to take them," cried Tola angrily, grasping the boy again by the arm. "And since he had put me to so much unjust trouble I took all that I found." Jether backed away from him in surprise and fear. "Then thou wilt some day suffer punishment for that theft," he said. "Does not our law say Tola interrupted him with a mocking laugh.

"Be not tiresome. That is the only law I warn thee to obey when thou doth meet my friends in Jerusalem. They are merry fellows, rich and free with youth and spirits. And when I shall take thee to the house of my good friend Nadina and shall introduce rou to her daughter, Tisha, the fairest in all Jerusalem, shouldst thou preach to them they would never forgive me for bringing thee along. As for Tisha, I really think she might

Jether turned toward him curiously and asked:

"Aye, Tisha of Babylon, now the fairest maid in all Jerusalem. For her favors men would almost pay the ransom of a king, yet Tisha scorns them all and boasts that she will be won by love alone. Such a lad as thou, with wealth, youth, good looks-why, fair Tisha would worship thee."

"Nay, I know naught of women," replied Jether hesitatingly. "I know naught of love save that I bear my mother and my cousin Naomi, and for any else I care not."

"What an innocent fool thou art!" taunted Tola, with a laugh. "That youthful innocence will attract fair Tisha far more than gold shekels. What sayst thou, wilt thou come with me?"

Jether hesitated. From the distance came the sound of a silver trumpet.

He heard it and started. "The trumpets call! I must away!"

he cried. "I cannot answer now." Tola threw his mantle over his shoulder and rapped upon the table for the landlord. Old Ozen came from a room within, and Tola tossed him a coin.

"This for thy reckoning, landlord," he said sharply. "As for thee, my good friend Jether, farewell. I journey toward Jerusalem."

Again the trumpet blew.
"I am late. Already I fear my father's anger for leaving the sheep untended. My brother Gaal will once more taunt me with my neglect. One moment, Tola. Come with me, and I will ask my father for my portion and go with thee.' Tola slapped him affectionately upon the back. "Thou art a good lad, after all," he said. "Bring thy gold and come with me. I will await thee here while thou dost get thy portion."

"I will come, portion or no portion," declared Jether firmly. "What!" cried Tola in pretended surprise. "Wouldst live upon another's money?" "If my father deny me I shall earn my own money." "Thou art a fool to spend thy days in labor, so that thy brother Gaal may have what is thine. Go thou, demand thy portion and join me. Thy father canst not refuse thee. And if he does, ask thy mother."

The boy smiled at the mention of his mother.

"My mother loves me," he said sim-"I shall hate to leave her, but when I come back, laurel crowned and rich, I will make my mother proud of Very well, Tola, I will go to my father. Come thou with me and wait a little on the road below, as my father hath a good memory for faces, and thou didst say that once when thou wert a lad he did wrongly accuse thee of theft." Tola smiled sardonically.

"Thy father Jesse is keen in spite of his years," he said curtly. "Perhaps it were better that I should not be there when thou dost ask for thy money. But spend no time crying thine eyes out on thy mother's breast, for we must start this night. Come, Jether! Get thy money, and then we start for Jerusalem"-

"For Jerusalem?" repeated the boy excitedly.

"For Jerusalem," repeated Tola, with a grim smile, "and Tisha," he added under his breath, with a little laugh-"Tisha." He chuckled again. (To be Continued)

Caleb Cushing's Dress. Caleb Cushing's peculiar manner of dress and his eccentricities were frequently the subject of newspaper articles. Although quite a large and portly man, his clothes always seemed to be two or three sizes too large for him and of the cheapest material. He always during both summer and winter wore a large cloth cap pulled close down on his head and altogether looked anything but the brilliant jurist and diplomat. One day, after reading an unusually caustic comment upon his dress, he remarked to a friend, guess by the time that fool is as old as I am he will care more for comfort than fashion."

Average of Wind.

Some builders of windmills estimate that a wind sixteen miles an hour may be expected for eight hours per day on the average for every day in the year. This does not mean that such a wind can be relied upon every day in the year, but that the average wind all the year round would equal sixteen miles an hour for eight hours every day .-London Standard.

START FIGHT ON FLIES TODAY

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, it has often been said. and its truth has been demonstrated in more cases than one. Many a housewife has found to her sorrow that this saying is particularly true with regard to flies, for a fly left undisturbed in May means a million alive and healthy in June.

This is the season of the year when flies begin to swarm. With the first warm days come the first flies. First one appears, then another, and before the housewife realizes it a whole brood fills her house. Housewives, begin your fight against flies now. Do not let even one stay in your home undisturbed. Don't think to yourself, as so many women do, "Oh, well, one fly doesn't matter. It is time enough to get after them when a half dozen appear." Begin at once with the very first fly that appears. Have no mercy on them at all.

Every year hundreds of women read dozens of just such warnings as this against the fly, and pay no more attention to them than if they had never read a word. Just so long as such silly, headstrong women exist will that dangerous menace, the house fly, continue to thrive.

If these women only could be made to realize that no more serious danger exists than the house fly perhaps they would do their part to eliminate the peril. Statistics tell us that for every man killed in battle ten are killed by the house fly. If each and every one of you women would only lend your assistance in making this a nation-wide crusade against the fly there might be some hope of wiping out the trail of disease which always follows in its wake.

You have all seen, at some time or other, enlarged photographs of the fly, with its tentacles. Beneath the feet are soft pads, which catch and carry thousands of disease germs. Every time they settle on food they leave a few of these germs behind to endanger the health, and even the lives, of those who eat the germ-laden food.

There is really no excuse for the woman who reads of the definite danger lurking in flies' feet and yet is too careless or too lazy to kill them when they are flying about food.

Start at once, for if you let even one escape it will be a thousand times multiplied in another month. Your first step toward protecting yourself and your family from the deadly onslaughts of the fly should be having the house thoroughly screened. Every window should have a screen, and you should see to it that no one leaves a window open without first putting the screen

Then you must be very careful not to leave any dishes standing around with bits of food on them. Wash the dishes right up at once, and see that scrupulous cleanliness is maintained about the kitchen. Be sure that your garbage can is kept covered, for files will gather there more quickly than anywhere else.

One way to control the fly is to catch it in such a trap as is shown above. The trap may be placed near the garbage can, or any other place where the flies are sure to come. A simple and effective tray may be made from a grocery box by substituting wire netting for the top and two sides, cutting a round hole in the bottom and inserting in it a wire netting cone with an eighth-inch opening at the bottom and a half-inch opening at the top. Some article of food, preferably a fish head, should be placed inside for bait. The trap must be elevated several inches above the ground, so as to give the flies a chance to enter. When the trap is full, it may be emptied by shaking its contents through a small opening, ordinarily closed by a sliding or. The trap described and shown in the illustration is a particularly effective one, as it was planned with a view to the fly's habits. The odor of food leads the fly to enter the trap at the bottom. Once inside it is attracted to the top by the light. When it gets out of the wire cone it cannot escape. The trap has the additional virtue of being inexpensive. It may be made at a cost of about 20 cents and

LESSON FOR APRIL 22

JESUS ANOINTED AT BETHANY.

LESSON TEXT-John 12:1-11.
GOLDEN TEXT-She hath done what she could.—Mk. 14:5.

This is a lesson of Jesus in the home. It occurred at the beginning of passion week. We have before us the master; the worker, Martha; the worshiper, Mary; the witness, Lazarus; the traitor, Judas, and the people with-An unconscious bit of wisdom fell from the lips of that good house wife who exclaimed, "How much better my neighbors' houses look when I have my windows clean." Too much we are looking through the eyes of selfishness. Out of this lesson let us learn to look through unselfish eyes.

I. Unjust Criticism (vv. 1-6). It is six days before Jesus' last Passover. The accounts of Matthew and Mark suggest it to have been within two days, because they mentioned this feast after telling of the conspiracy of the chief priests and elders with Judas, who came to his determination to sell his Master after the reprimand given him on this occasion.

(1) The Value of Good Deeds. Jesus did not forget, in the supreme hour of his life, the friends whom he loved. To bring them some further spiritual gifts, he had come to their home in Bethany. Doubtless he also had in mind the desire to nourish the faith which had been kindled in the hearts of all by the resurrection of Lazarus, just as he returned to Cana after having performed his first miracle (John 4:54). Jesus was Very God of Very God, yet he was very much of a real man; therefore he enjoyed the pleasures of home as much as other men, and the joys of kinship and brotherhood.

(2) The Wealth of Good Deeds. Out of her love Mary expended $51, probably her whole treasure, in the purchase of this alabaster box, and put It aside to use it upon him at the proper time. We do not think that she stopped to calculate the cost of this ointment. Love never estimates value. Her deed proved a safer guide of conduct than the calculating prudence of Judas and the other disciples (see Matt. 26:8). Such deeds are always looked upon with suspicion. The Iscariots usually are the leaders in criticizing the actions of others. Envy lay at the bottom of their criticism, but good deeds are unconscious, for we read that "the house was filled with

(3) A Standard of Good Deeds (Mark 14:8); "She did what she could," and we have also the record of good deeds, a memorial to her (Mark 14:9). A large number of people who never give of their own to the poor nor to the kingdom of God are willing to criticize others who do give out of the gratitude of their loving hearts.

II. Gracious Commendation 7-11). Jesus praised where his disciples and Judas criticized. The poor they always had with them (Mark 14:7). This must have been a challenge that evidently they had not at tended to the poor as they should. Jesus also tells them frankly that whatever they do for him they must do speedily. Jesus' judgment upon Judas is a rebuke of the disciples; his exposure of the sophistry of the critics and of their subtlety is suggestive. Upon Mary's act he bestowed the highest possible praise. "She hath done what she could.". That is all that is asked of anyone (II Cor. 8:12). Such commendation as Jesus bestowed upon Mary he bestowed upon no other, and his wonderful predictions concerning her (Matt. 26:13) have been literally fulfilled. Jesus' judgment upon Mary is also suggestive. He shielded her, "let her alone;" He approved her works as being good, and he interpreted her innermost purpose in the act which she had performed. This outward act was literally the pouring forth of her heart's adoration and worship. Martha was in part taken up with her household service. Lazarus was in part taken up with his enjoyment of the presence of Jesus, but Mary was wholly taken up with Jesus himself. Does the record surprise us: "Wheresoever this gospel shall be preached throughout the whole world, this also which she hath done shall be spoken of for a memorial of her?" Judas, under the judgment of Jesus, was stung (Matt. 26:14) and hurries at once to the enemies of Jesus to strike a bargain with them for the betrayal of his Lord though he did not secure from these enemies the equivalent of what she had poured upon him. Christ will be no man's debtor. He takes the poor offerings we lay before him, and crowns them with the richest reward. Mary's gift of ointment received words of commendation of which she never dreamed, and a reward far beyond her fondest hope, and has been the fount of countless deeds rich with love. Many people had gathered, not only for Jesus' sake, but that they might see Lazarus also. He drew people because of what Jesus had done for him, yet he drew them to Jesus. This brought him also under demnation, for we must share the bitterness of the foes of Jesus.

PERSONAL RIGHTS.

Replying to the "personal liberty' argument of the wets, Clinton N. Howard, who is characterized as one of the bomb-throwers in the prohibition ranks, puts it this way:

"You have a personal right to eat putrid meat; I have no right to sell it. If your hog dies a natural death, or with the cholera, you have a personal right to grind it up into sausage and eat it; but you have no right to offer it for public sale. A man has a personal right to corn his dead mule and serve it on his own table. You have as good a right to eat your cat as I have my chicken, or your dog as I have my pig. The Chinese in New York have a dog feast at their New Year's celebration and the police have never interfered with their personal right. But if you opened a meat market and skinned dogs and cats and exposed horse sausage for public sale the meat inspector would confiscate the entire supply, close up the place as a public nuisance and arrest you for selling what you had a personal right to eat.

"We have a law against the sale of impure literature. We do not say that a man shall not read it, even though that may harm him; because it is his personal right to damage his own character and corrupt his own mind; but if he opens a shop for the dissemination and sale of such literature to corrupt the youth of the community, society steps in and interferes-not with his personal liberty to read what he likes, but with his social right to sell that which corrupts public morals. Under this law tons of impure literature, licentious post cards and immoral books are seized and destroyed every year, without compensation to their owners; indeed, they are prosecuted and fined or jailed for the offense against public morality and decency. That is prohibition."

MORE AND BETTER.

The argument that the workingman will lose his job if the liquor traffic is abolished is based upon the absurd proposition that, if the liquor dealer fails to get the money now spent for beer and whisky, nobody else will get

It is assumed that the farmer who now sells his grain and grapes, his apples and cherries, to the liquor interests will be compelled to destroy them; when the fact is that figures furnished by the United States government clearly indicate that the ability of the American farmer to raise enough grain to adequately supply this country is gradually decreasing. To listen to the defender of the saloon, one would think that nobody likes grapes and cherries and apples, unless they come in form of booze. There are millions of youngsters who would chance to eat all the fruit they really byterian Church.

MODERATE DRINKING

The degeneration due to the so called "moderate" consumption of alcohol is very similar to senile decay, in the opinion of Prof. G. Sims Woodhead, M. A., M. D., F. R. C. P., F. R. S. E., of England.

"Alcoholic degeneration, however," Professor Woodhead points out, "does not proceed equally in every part of the body. The weaker tissues are first attacked and the patient gives way at the weak link of the chain.

"Alcohol calls upon the reserv strength which ought to be held like a balance at the bank to meet sudden and unexpected emergencies. If you have such a physical reserve, you are able to tide over emergencies and wear out gradually, but if you let alcohol withdraw your balance, exhausting your reserve, you may become a physical bankrupt at any moment."

The story is told of a man who one night fell over a cliff. Thinking that bottom was hundreds of feet below, he clung to the edge as long as he could, crying for help. When, exhausted, he let go, he found that the good firm road was only a few inches under his feet.

Some there are who cling to the liquor traffic imagining that to let go with silent tread. No dry twigs snap means a drop into industfial chaos. under his feet and no loose stones But community after community has tried letting go of it. No disaster has followed. The good sound road of industry furnishes firm footing for all, He sees tracks and signs which reveal individuals or communities, who let to him the nature and habits of the go of booze. ## SCOUTS' EDUCATIONAL WORK

No organization in the country has any stronger leadership in educational matters than has been secured by the Boy Scouts of America. Members of the board are well qualified to keep the work of the Boy Scout movement in full accord with the most modern and best ideas of education. The national council has planned to refer to this department all matters of an educational character. The department is now preparing:

1. To give leadership in a series of conferences for scoutmasters and other scout officials throughout the country throughout the country either in connection with established educational institutions or under the auspices of local councils. 3. To arrange for the presentation of the merits of the scout program and its appeal for leadership before various student bodies and educational and religious conventions and confer-

4. To co-operate in making "scouting," the official bulletin, helpful to scoutmasters and others actively engaged in scout work through definite suggestions and general educational ar-

5. To develop correspondence courses for inspiration and instruction for scout leaders.

6. To cultivate the interest of schoolteachers and others particularly interested in educational problems through educational journals and conferences

A TROOP'S BIG GOOD TURN.

Troop 1 of Santa Fe, N. M., had its first opportunity to do a community good turn when the New Mexico State Education association met for its annual convention in their city.

Hotel accommodations were limited and many of the visiting teachers had be delighted to have at least one to be assigned to private houses. The scouts served as guides, one riding on need.—Charles Stelzle, Member of the running board of each automobile Machinists' Union, and Secretary of and helping the teachers with their

No tips were taken, although many were offered. The work of the scouts made a great hit with the town as well as with the visitors. The chamber of commerce and the women's clubs are to give the scouts a banquet to show their appreciation. The association adopted resolutions thanking the troop for its efficient service.

SCOUT HANDBOOK BIG SELLER.

Our country's most popular juvenile book is not, as might be supposed, 'Robinson Crusoe" or "Treasure Island," but the "Handbook for Boys," published by the Boy Scouts of America. Within the last two years there have been published more than 360,000 copies of this book, and it is a good guess that more copies have been sold than have been sold of both "Treasure Island" and "Robinson Crusoe" together during the same period. Indeed, it is not too much to say that if the figures were available to make such a comparison possible, it would be shown that there have been published in the last two years more copies of the "Handbook for Boys" than all the standard stories for boys published during the same period.

AMONG THE SCOUTS.

A scout walks through the woods turn over and throw him off his balance. His eyes are keen and he sees many things that others do not see. ees much, but is little seen

A scout can make himself known to a brother scout wherever he may be by a method which only scouts can know. He has brothers in every city world. Wherever he goes he can give his signs and be assured of a friendly welcome. He can talk with a brother scout without making a sound, or he can make known his message by imitating the click of a telegraph key. The New York State College of Forestry at Syracuse university has of-fered one scholarship annually to a Boy Scout who is a resident of the state of New York.

WHEN LAYING OUT A CITY

Proper Planning, by Adding to Its Appearance, Bound to Bring Desirable Financial Results.

Are we laying out, for instance, a new suburb? Is it not better and more businesslike, and more likely to produce adequate financial results if we determine beforehand which of the streets are likely to become great traffic thoroughfares and to give them ample width of broad macadam of paved surface, providing only in the residential streets sufficient paved surface to allow two tradesmen's carts to pass, as deemed advisable from time to time. and laying down the remainder in trees 2. To promote and develop training and grass, in a way which will save courses for leadership in scouting the rate-payers large sums and at the same time make the street or houlevard a more desirable place in which to

Such instances could be multiplied a thousandfold. The results, so far of practical city planning will convince anyone that the scope, influence and finance of city planning are so much a subject for the earnest consideration of every man who is a good citizen and loves his city and his fellow citizens. that none can afford to neglect it. Nay, more than this, any city which does neglect this great subject, cannot hopto continue in these go-ahead days, to compete with other cities and towns which are wide awake to take full advantage of the opportunities for advancement and betterment which it provides.-Exchange.

COMBINING CITY AND COUNTY

By Cutting Expenses There Would Be More Money to Spend on Public Improvements.

Mayor Campbell of Houston has started a discussion of a proposal to combine city and county governments. and eliminate one set of officers. The writer advocated that several years ago, but plans to reduce the expense of government were not then as much in favor as plans to increase it.

There is no sound reason why a commissioners' court and a city commission should both be required for legislative service, nor is there any apparent need for the double service of a city and a county police force. Many other duplications could be suggested equally wasteful.

The city and county of St. Louis are identical. New York and London are under the same single system of government. So it cannot be urged that the plan will not fit a city.

The truth is that the American system seems to be based on a demand that provision shall be made for every man to hold an office who wants one. It has multiplied offices to a degree unknown in any other country, and has, as a result, driven the cost of government to a figure which exceeds that of any other country in the world. if the military branch is excluded from the comp

Dwindling Wool Supply. War and embargoes are making textile men uneasy as to the wool supply. World demand is increasing while the supply is growing less. Our own needs are twice what we raise and the chasm between domestic supply and demand is widening. Our production is less today than 25 years ago, while the population has increased 60 per cent. The difference between what we produce and what we use must be made up by imports. with the world bidding against us. The British embargo on wool shows how precarious is our position. Yet, in peace and in war, wool is an absolute necessity. Several years ago when alarm was taken at the declining beef supply many felt that the situation could not be remedied. But today cattle are increasing in the United States. More sheep and wool can be raised also if proper attention be given the industry.

Wages Go Up in Japan.

Thanks to the general business activity in consequence of the great European war the working classes in Japan are now unusually prosperous and contented, says East and West. To quote an example, hatoba coolies in Yokohama are now getting 50 yen per month, while waste paper buyers are making as much as 1.50 yen a day. Sake shops near the foreign and native bunds are now busier than ever, being well patronized by the coolie and lower classes. A fact worth recording is that the latter do not now indulge in gambling on as large a scale as formerly. Salaried men alone are the victims of the steady rise in the price of daily commodities.

Cities Take Up Child Hygiene.

More than 400 American cities, each of more than 10,000 population, have reported to the children's bureau, a branch of the department of labor, that municipal funds are being given special children's hygiene work. In more than 20 cities a special depart-ment for this work is being operated. -Providence Bulletin.

General Education for those not far advanced, combined with some vocational training. No matter what your present advancement, we can put you with others like yourself and give chance for most rapid progress.

3rd Door—Berea's General Academy Course

For those who are not expecting to teach and who are not going thru College and desire more general education. It also gives the best general education for those who wish a good start in study and expect to carry it on by themselves.

4th Door—Berea's Normal School

This gives the best training for those who expect to leach. Courses are so arranged that young people can teach through the summer and fall and attend school through the winter and spring, thus earning money to keep right on in their course of study. Read Dinsmore's great book, "How to Teach a District School."

5th Door—Berea's Preparatory Academy Course This is the straight road to College-best training in Mathematics,

Science, Languages, History and all preparatory subjects. The Academy is now Berea's largest department.

6th Door-Berea College

This is the crown of the whole Institution, and provides standard courses in all advanced subjects.

Any able-bodied young man or young woman can get an education at Berea if there is the will to do so.

It is a great advantage to continue during winter and spring and have a full year of continuous study. Many young people waste time in the public schools going over and over the same things when they might be improving much faster by coming to Herea and starting in on new studies with some of the best young men and women from other counties and states.

Applicants must bring or send a testimonial showing that they are above 15 years old, in good health and of good character. This may be signed by some former Berea student or some reliable teacher or neighbor. The use of tobacco is strictly forbidden.

Spring Term opens March 28th. Rooms nearly all taken. Don't come unless room is engaged by a dollar sent to your friend, the Secretary.

Ghe Weatherproof Home-

The extremes of weather and temperature are a great factor in deteriorating property and giving it a run-down appearance. Unless it is kept well painted with good paint, moisture gets at the wood and starts decay, and soon repairs are needed.

Fewer Eggs are required with NYAL BAKING

In many recipes the number of eggs may be reduced with excellent results by using an additional quantity of Royal Baking Powder, about a teaspoon, for each egg omitted. The following recipe is a practical example:

Chocolate Sponge Roll

DIRECTIONS—Sift flour, baking powder and salt together three times. Beat whole eggs. Add slowly sugar, then boiling water slowly; add next vanille, melted chocolate and melted shortening, stillout beating. Sift in dry ingredients, and fold in as lightly as possible. Pour into large baking pan lined with oiled paper, and bake in slow oven twenty minutes. When done, turn out on a damp, hot cloth, spread with white icing and roll.
